

Can a notary apostille a document?

No.

In the U.S.A., a notary public cannot and does not issue apostilles or authentication certificates on documents.

Only Secretaries of State in all 50 USA states can issue state-level document apostille certifications that originated in their states and the U.S State Department in Washington D.C. can issue federal-level apostille certifications.